PREFACE

Many instructive and interesting incidents are recorded in the Bible concerning which the student can recall but the name of the principal character or the nature of the event. It has been the purpose of the author of this book to list every important incident recorded in both the Old and the New Testaments, entering it under the familiar title of the incident, or under the names of prominent persons mentioned.

Two essential things have been kept in thought, viz.: accuracy and completeness. In designating the book, chapter and verse which record important occurrences, chronological order has been observed, thus making it possible to follow the history of the important Bible characters as a continuous narrative. It is felt this arrangement will prove both interesting and instructive to the student.

Great care has also been exercised in compiling the outstanding prayers, parables, and instances of spiritual healing mentioned in both the Old and the New Testaments. Many incidents relative to the life of Christ Jesus and his disciples are sometimes recorded in only one of the Gospels, others in one or more. Where specific incidents are mentioned by more than one author, the chapters and verses of each book are grouped in this concordance, thus making it convenient for the student to read what each writer has written regarding the same event. This procedure has also been followed where a duplicate record is found in the books of Samuel, Kings and Chronicles.

The object of this book is to help Bible students to become more familiar with the Scriptures, and be able readily to find incidents which will bring to them helpful lessons.

—THE AUTHOR.
